

Derg Parish
Gravestone Inscriptions.

St John's Church of Ireland
Castledearg
County Tyrone

Memento mori from grave 77A

Introduction.

This edition is a revised version of a document produced for Derg Parish Church, Castleberg, County Tyrone by a group from Dublin (details unknown) over 30 years ago. The original document has been digitised, has had an index added and further information on the inscriptions added by various people. These additions are credited with initials in curly brackets {}. Notes in square brackets [] are not on the gravestones.

This revision was undertaken to make the information more easily accessible, primarily for family historians. Many of the gravestones are wearing and becoming harder to decipher and this provides an invaluable record for future generations. When using these records be aware that they are interpretations of what could be deciphered and as such may not be entirely accurate transcriptions of the original inscriptions. The spelling and layout reflect the originals.

With many thanks to Kathleen Caldwell for proofreading and to Bernie Donaghey Gamble for her help with many of the transcriptions. Contributions from Kathleen Caldwell {KC}, Bernie Donaghey Gamble {BD}, James Emery {JE}, Joan Leask {JL}, Davis Lecky {DL}, Emma McClure {EM} and Kate Tammemagi {KT}.

References to differences from EH's transcriptions refers to Eileen Hewson who published some records in "Tyrone Graveyards, Part IV", published by Kabristan Archives, Wem, Shropshire. Copyright is claimed, so significant differences are only mentioned but not copied into this document

Sheena McClure 2013
